Bachelor of International Studies (BIntSt)

2015

These Program Rules should be read in conjunction with the University's policies (http://www.adelaide.edu.au/policies).

Overview

This program offers students an opportunity to explore the interrelations between nations and peoples, and to examine global politics, problems and actors from a variety of perspectives.

The program has specialisations in three areas:

Asia's rising powers: explores the changing politics in the Indo-Pacific region. It concentrates on rising powers such as China and India; however, students will also have the opportunity to study the politics and foreign policy of a range of countries in the region, as well as Australia's relationship with this part of the world.

International security: explores the nature of security, conflict, and intervention in global politics. It explores contending theoretical perspectives on international conflict, violence, and war on human populations. Courses focus on the role of strategic culture in defining interests, intelligence, the impact of globalisation on changing forms of security and violence, and the increasing level of human insecurity. Particular interest is taken in non-military cross border issues that impact on human security, including environmental degradation and change, migration and trade.

Global governance and justice: explores the role of international institutions and regimes in the governance of complex issues, and it pays particular attention to how governance is now increasingly complex involving non-state actors such as credit rating agencies and / or private security firms, and new forms of governance at the national, regional, and global levels dealing with cross border issues such as environment, migration and finance.

Students complete Core courses in each of these specialisations and can complete further courses in one or more of these specialisations, as well as courses in History, Development Studies, European or Asian Studies.

Studies in a foreign language are highly recommended and students are encouraged to spend one or two semesters at an overseas university to gain valuable international experience and cultural perspective.

The Bachelor of International Studies is an AQF Level 7 qualification with a standard full-time duration of 3 years.
